The International Association for Court Administration (IACA)

"The Court Administrator" Edition #17

Official Call For Articles-DEADLINE EXTENDED*!!

Dear IACA Membership,

I hope that you are all staying healthy and pondering ideas for articles for the next edition of The Court Administrator! The goal of this IACA Publication is to share ideas, suggestions and best practices with members of the international court community. All topics with the aim of improving judicial administration are welcome to be submitted. IACA encourages communication between global courts and this publication facilitates our goals.

Our reach expands to those members who are able to share their court's developments and adaptations with our ever-changing world. Hot topics right now of interest include judicial innovations and Artificial Intelligence, which provide our readers with a wide scope of discoveries. Please consider sharing your thoughts and "hot topics" with courts around the world.

IACA members are creative, with vast imaginations. You focus on original solutions to issues and problems common to all of us, while managing staff and accurate record keeping. Those who appear in your courts (either in person or remotely/virtually) seek answers, justice, impartiality, fairness and honesty. Be a "Court Influencer" by sharing your advancements, adaptations and problems. If you have an issue in your court, we can find administrators and judges to help you meet your challenges.

We hope that you enjoyed reading and sharing our Buenos Aries special conference edition. Our sponsors and supporters offer new ideas and customized product solutions for your courts, and we encourage you to reach out and let us know what you need.

I extend my personal invitation to each of you to submit an article for our 17th Edition of The Court Administrator.

For those authors who are submitting articles on court administration must be limited as closely as possible to 2,000 words. If you have illustrations and graphics to accompany your article, they must be submitted separate and apart from the article.

In order for us to meet our publication deadline, we will need to receive articles not later than September 15, 2024* so that we may publish this edition before the Singapore conference.

Authors are requested to email the Executive Editor in advance of submission of their article to notify us of the proposed article topic, as well as their notice of intent to submit, so that we may budget for space and timing. Additional information regarding the editorial policy of TCA as well as article guidelines may be found at https://www.iaca.ws/the-court-administrator.

Prospective articles submitted for consideration for publication in The Court Administrator should be sent to the Executive Editor in English and in Microsoft® Word format. Please do not forget to fill out and to submit our bio form as well as a separate jpg photo of the author(s). We want to "meet" you, even if we all cannot do that in person. One of the objectives of this publication is to share "best practices," suggestions and ideas, and to introduce court administrators to our authors who are willing to connect with courts all around the world.

Please do not let this opportunity to submit an article for the next edition of The Court Administrator pass you by.

We are grateful to all of our conference sponsors for their collaborations, support, loyalty, and their article contributions to The Court Administrator. We look forward to welcoming sponsors, contributors and attendees for our conference in Singapore in November 2024.

Please do not hesitate to contact me with any questions or concerns. We look forward to Edition #17 and hope you do too. Thank you again for your support and contributions.

Stay healthy and be safe!

Eileen Levine, Executive Editor

Authors: If you have a specific request, please send me an email and we will do our best to accommodate.
